Manchuli and Hailar Captured—Harbin Is Believed Next Russian Objective

RESISTANCE BREAKING UNDER RUSSIAN BLOWS

Hopes That Events in Manchuria May Prove Solvent of Long Civil War Issue

BY CABLE TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO SHANGHAI — President Chiang-Kai-shek has returned to Nanking, leaving behind in central China a lull in the fighting, which is believed to indicate some sort of an agree-ment reached since the visit of the Finance Minister, T. V. Soong, but he faces a graver issue, since the Russians have commenced a serious penetration of Manchuria, capturing Manchuli and Kailar.

This is a most serious phase of the Sino-Russian dispute and it is believed in some quarters that the Soviet's intention is to advance to capture Harbin. Many influences are being exerted in Chinese circles to end the civil war and induce the leaders to drop their animosities and unite in face of the seriousness of the menace from the north. Conversations are already proceeding to this end and the Russian campaign may prove a solvent of the interminable Chinese war situation and provide inspiration for the amalgamation of forces if the Russian advance con

NAVAL PARITY WITH FRANCE Difficulty Lies in Varied

ITALY DEMANDS

Views on Requirements of Two Countries

BY CABLE FROM MONITOR BUREAU PARIS-Italy asks for "absolute parity" with France in naval forces, according to terms of a note which Count Manzoni, Italian Ambassador, has presented to Aristide Briand, Foreign Minister, France must accept this condition as a preliminary to further negotiations regarding categories of ships which have now opened. The Quai d'Orsay in its study of the communication, is en-deavoring to formulate an answer which will keep the parleys going but without completely committing France to this course

Albert Julien, political writer, remarks in Petit Parisien, in which he gives a summary of the Italian note, that it is impossible to subscribe to the Italian demand because of the varying needs of the two countries in the matter of naval defenses. A year ago Premier Mussolini informed the French Ambassador in Rome, M. de Beaumarchais, that Italy was ready to disarm to the lowest point likewise acceptable to the strongest continental power.

This meant equality with France and this thesis is now reaffirmed in the note transmitted by Signor Manzoni. Article eight of the League Covenant is cited where it speaks of reducing armaments to a compatible with security but recalled here that the geographical situation of each state should also be taken into account.

The difficulty lies therefore in the differing conceptions of Italy and France as to one another's requirements in naval forces. HOOVER SEEKS TO RAISE FARM BUYING POWER

Tells Agricultural Leaders Administration's Plans to Improve Conditions

PRESIDENT ASKS AID OF STATES AND CITIES

Urges Speeding Up of Programs for Construction Work-Wide Response Given

President Hoover has moved to inthe stabilization of prosperity.

At a meeting with agricultural leaders, the President has begun the formulation of methods of maintain-ing agricultural purchasing power to parallel the steps already taken to bulwark the buying power of workers in industry and commerce.

Meanwhile governors and mayors, responding to the President's direct appeal, outlined their plans for expanding public works, indicating that these programs would be pushed to the full limit of existing appropriations and extended wherever expediency would permit.

The scope of co-operation by state and municipal authorities also was indicated in a series of replies from governors and mayors of the larger cities to an inquiry by The Christian Science Monitor asking in-formation on their plans for cooperation with President Hoover

SPECIAL FROM MONITOR BUREAU

WASHINGTON-With the agencies of government of all divisions, from federal to municipal, and the forces of trade and business activity mustering their economic resources to the support of his prosperity-maintenance program, President Hoover turned to the agricultural field, and in a conference with farm leaders obtained from them a first-hand survey of the situation in that industry. The Farmers' Union was repr ented at the conference by Huff, president, C. S. Barrett, C. C. Talbot, Louis Chambers and C. R. tives, freight rates and other items. The purchasing power of agricul-ture is a vital element in the eco-available to the farm board for its work. By meeting and talking the situation over with the farm leaders the President undertook to ascertain agriculture's views on what it considers necessary in the way of further financial assistance in handling the marketing of crops.

It was also intimated that some interjected into the discussion. In convening the special session President urged a limited tariff revision with emphasis on agricultural commodities as an important phase of the farm relief legislation

Republican leaders of Congress discarded this program, however, and undertook to put through a general tariff revision with extensive indus-trial increases. This attempt has so far been blocked by a Democratic-Progressive coalition in the Senate, which has drastically rewritten the bill to conform with the President's views.

Having marshaled the full strength of the agencies of the Federal Government the President in a personal those whose vocations make them dependent on knowledge of works of telegram to each of the 48 Governors of the Union called upon them to join the national prosperity project and organize their state, county and municipal divisions to co-operate to their fullest extent.

It woman or man has the right to elect would be helpful if road, street, or be elected in municipal elections." public building and other construction of this type could be speeded up and adjusted in such fashion as to further employment."

On behalf of the President it was emphasized at the White House that while the Federal Government will take the leadership in the great national economic mobilization, the President desires industry in all its branches and the other divisions of government to organize and carry out this program. From the Federal Government, through precept, advice, co-operation and guidance will come the impetus, it was declared, but it is up to the Nation to do the real job.

So that elements entering the situation may be clearly ascertained and their favorable influence made use of in maintaining the "tone" of the country, the President is making every effort to obtain authoritative reports of contemplated business projects. So far he has been advised by the railroad executives of the country that they contemplate more than $1,250,000,000 worth of construction work for the coming year; road builders and other construction leaders estimated that more than $2,000,000,000 will be spent the coming year for highways and roads of all kinds, and the American Tele-phone and Telegraph Company has advised the President that it anticipates increasing by $100,000,000 for total of $700,000,000 its construction and development work.

Canvass of Expenditures

In his message to the state execu tives the President suggested a state, municipal and county canvass of expenditure volume for the coming year and a report to him. To this end Chamber of Commerce of the United States has called ence of business leaders in the capital for Dec. 5, and also to stimulate and co-ordinate the vast industrial and trade resources that will be represented at this gathering. Over 00 business leaders are expected to President Hoover will address this gathering, which will be presided over by Julius H. Barnes, chairman of the chamber's board of direc-tors and head of a national business committee named by the President to co-operate with him in his economic program.

According to Mr. Hyde, agricultural conditions are improving, an extremely favorable factor in the general business situation.

Agriculture as a whole had a favor able balance of about $150,000,000 last year, Mr. Hyde said, "whereas this year the estimate is that the profits of the industry will increase to $250,000,000. Although this profit is comparatively small, when it is considered in connection with the size of the total return of about $12, 500,000, it is progress in the right direction, and will increase the farmer's purchasing power."

Hopeful Views Expressed similarly optimistic view was aken by Mr. Legge. "The farmer's conditions have generally shown some slight imovement. There is a more hopeful feeling now than there has been for some time back," he said. "Unless the stock depression extends into commodity prices with the result of. seriously depressing values of produce, the farmer should not be hurt There has been some decline in the price of live stock but that has not been serious in the country generally Wheat has been holding fairly steady for some time. Commodity prices did not inflate with stock prices and consequently they should not go down, simply because stock prices go down.

"Prices are still low," added Mr. Legge, "but not so low as they have been in the past. In general the feeling is distinctly hopeful.'

It is pointed out that the Nation's general prosperity of the past five years was won in spite of the depression in the farming industry, which includes about one-third of the population: and that with improvement in sight for large sections of agriculture, the purchasing power of this may exert a stabilizing influence during the coming year.

Governors Pledge States to Program of Hoover to Maintain Prosperity

In response to a request from The Christian Science Monitor, Governors and Mayors of some of the leading cities in the United States have outlined their plans for supporting President Hoover's program of extending state and municipal public wor construction. The replies follow:

ARIZONA By Gov. J. C. Phillips

I am whole-heartedly behind the President in his plan to stimulate industry and to increase employment throughout the country dur-ing the winter months, in a period wherein usually is shown a tend-ency to slow down. This tendency is not as strong in Arizona as else where, this due to climatic condi-tions and to the fact that many of our industries, such as mining, have no seasonal activities.

Our agricultural interests also winter as well as summer periods of production. Thus far there is no large condition of unemployment, this happy state largely due to reclamation project ns now under way, with others of large importance contemplated for work in the near future.

It also is pleasing that no effect appears to have been had on Arizona business through any hysteria due to the late slump. The State itself is doing much building in additions to the Capitol and to sev-are planning construction of about 15 large highway bridges in different sections of the State, under a bond issue of the highway department, costing approximately $10,000,000, and this work will start immediately.

With legislative consent Kentucky hopes to start reconstruction of its prisons and penal institutions early in 1930, and an enlargement and improvement of the several eleemosynary institutions of the State are to be in cluded in this betterment program In the last few months several industrial plants have large located in Kentucky, and previously existing plants have increased their facilities and number of employees. Some of the railroads of the State are increasing their trackage enormously and making millions in investment. The first state-wide meeting of mayors to be called following President Hoover's announcement of proposed conferences to expand public works, was held at Lexington, Ky., Wednesday, adopted the slogan, "Less politics and more projects." At the peak of the season more than 25,000 men were at work. The public building program for the biennium amounts to $27,190,000, of which $1,085,000 is being used at sanatoria and the crippled children's hospital, $4,340,000 at educational institutions, $10,334,000 at welfare institutions, $10,437,000 in completing buildings in the capitol business stabilization and promotion of nation-wide prosperity, and will give him every possible support at my command.

UTAH

By Gov. George H. Dern

My recommendations to the 1929 Legislature of the State of Utah embodied the suggestions of President Hoover. In a communication to the president of the Utah State Senate Mar. 9, 1929, I said in part:

"One of the purposes of the bill which provides for a state building program, is to co-operate with President Hoover in his plan for preventing unemployment and sustaining business activity. The plan contemplates using public construction work as a prosperity reserve by timing it so as to pre relieve periods of industrial depression.

It was explained that if the Federal Government and the states would co-operate in a judicious arrangement of construction work to stabilize employment, it might be a long step toward relieving periodic conditions of unemploy-ment. In order to carry out such a plan it is necessary to have a construction program and to invest the executive department with some discretion as to when projects should be built. "Many states are displaying eagerness to co-operate in carrying out President Hoover's for vard-looking plan, and H. B. No. 148 was drafted with the thought in mind of making Utah one of the

This feature of the bill was eliminated by the Legislature. In lieu of that the bill was amended, making it mandatory to construct certain buildings during the ensubiennium, and it was passed in that form.

Washington will continue with its present program of public work, but will not go beyond legislative appropriation in the attempt to stabilize prosperity. The state's present program of highway construction averages $1,-00,000 each month. In addition to this expenditure new buildings are being erected for state institutions as needed. At this time a woman's building is nearing completion at the state prison at Walla Walla; ward buildings are under construction at each of the three state hospitals. This type of work will go on in conformity with the program outlined by the Legis

ALBANY, N. Y.

By Mayor John Boyd Thacher I heartily concur in the program for engaging in large public construction as a means of stabiliz-ing business conditions generally at this time. The City of Albany has already undertaken a large program of public construction in connection with its port develop ment, new water supply, street extensions and public park improve ment, which will aggregate $15,-

During 1930 these operations will be brought to a peak, and will pro vide employment as well as a demand for materials. In addition to the water supply being brought 20 miles from the city a $1,000,000 reservoir is to be constructed within

Provision has just been made in the budget for increases in the salaries of police and firemen. The City Planning Commission is pre-paring its schedule of operations, which will undoubtedly lead to other public improvement projects for execution during the next few years. In the Albany port construction, warehouses, transit sheds. lumber terminal and other projects are to be executed in 1930.

The city is in a strong financial position, as evidenced by the recent sale of $5,026,000 of municipal bonds, and is certain of the economic wisdom of public construction at this time, as a stimulus for home building and commercial enterprise.

INDIANAPOLIS

By Mayor L. Ert Slack With our diversification of industrial and commercial enterprises, it is certain that Indianapolis and Indiana will see no distressing conditions in business.

The Indianapolis program for public improvements is not to be reduced in a single instance, according to our budgeted plan for 1930, and, if anything, public works will be extended beyond the volume recorded in 1929. It is well established that Indianapolis will cause at least $4,000,000 to be spent on public construction in 1930, and it is the plan that $1,500,000 more may be spent. This program contemplates the expenditure in the next year of $1,500,000 by the city, county elevation in Indianapolis. A conservative estimate of $1,500,000 will be spent on street improvements and extensions. Normal sewer extension requirements will call for $500,000. The city will spend another $200,000 on flood prevention work. Bridges to be will cost $310,000. municipal airport will have new buildings and runways which will cost $200,000.

The city immediately will spend $531,000 on a new power plant for the city hospital, and is planning other buildings to cost $875,000. Boulevard extensions proposed will cost $250,000, and a sewer project for Broad Ripple will cost $300,000.

SAN FRANCISCO

By Mayor James Rolph Jr.

In so far as is possible under its budget system, San Francisco will carry out the President's policy. It has always been our object to offer public works as a palliative to unemployment, and this year and in future years we intend planning works that will relieve the situation in bad times.

UTICA, N. Y. By Mayor Fred J. Rath

Utica's public works program which has been carried on with new stimulus during the last two years, calls for an expansion during the next few years which is even greater than heretofore.

We are considering erection of a new city hall in the not distant future, construction of a great park avenue overcrossing, which is one of the greatest items on our program in years, as well as many to the municipality.

Utica is expanding industrially by the addition of new industries and the tremendous expansion of the Skenandoa Rayon Corporation The city faces the new year with great confidence of progress.

Undoubtedly the crash in security values has affected a great many people, some of them seriously. Most of the losses, however, have been paper losses.

The forward step of President Hoover in mobilizing the industrial forces of the country, and getting them committed to an organized and intelligent plan of capital ex-penditure for additions and improvements, has done much to hearten the whole country, and to aliay much of the hysteria which, for a few weeks, seemed to have taken a grip on people. States and municipalities are falling into step with this program, and planning to rush expenditures for needed improvements so as to insure continuous work for the laboring classes. There is every indication, therefore, that construction work of all kinds, and building operations will receive a great impetus in 1930. Such a program is bound to put into circulation billions of dollars that might otherwise not have been appropriated in this manner, and will offset to a large degree slackness in other lines. We look forward to a slight business recession in the immediate months ahead of us but we confidently believe that the recession will be short-lived and that the country will snap back into its pace of prosperous activity in a surpris-ingly short time. At the moment of writing, we have had almost no cancellations certainly not more than the normal amount for this season of the year. Our new business has more than made up for the cancellations. We are, of course, prepared to meet any recession that may come along but our well-considered opinion is that even at the very worst such more than 10 per cent of our vol-

business, not only in the development of our own publications, but in the growth of our other activities, such as our pattern and printing business, has brought us to the point this year where our earnings for 1930 should nearly double the earnings of this year (which will be the biggest year in our history) if business should follow its normal

Little men and big men alike will return to normal endeavor and enterprise and, in so doing, will pour water on the pad-

Probably the most serious result was the feeling of uncertainty and apprehension that was set up in minds of countless persons who had no actual part in the buying and selling of stocks, but who look at Wall Street as the clearing house of the feeling of the conti-

Of all the basic industries, the motor industry, the largest of them all, has been pointed out the great-est number of times as one of the chief sufferers of business depression. Yet it is a certainty that just as many people will make motor trips their principal vacation rec-reation next summer as did in 1929. The normal demand for replacement purposes will continue and that alone will absorb well over 2,000,000 cars. And the export market continues to expand. But these facts do not mean that 1930 and each succeeding year will oring new high records of production and sales. The motor industry, just as all others, must proceed on a sound, economical, conservative, et far-sighted, basis.

Speaking from the standpoint of the Marmon Company, we have carefully laid and well-thoughtout plans for next year—a program which we feel takes into consideration the economic aituation not only as it exists today, but as it is very likely to exist six months from now. We mean to pro-ceed forward on a substantial foundation that does not obscure progressiveness in the desire to achieve conservatism. In designing his vehicle, Darius forgot to equip it with an engine. An airplane engineer has to build a machine with enough stamina to keep going under all conditions. The automobile engineer must build a car having everything mechanically perfect, and, in addition, have adequate sales appeal. Diesel Becoming Standard

With the adoption of the Diesel engine by airplane engineers, it has been conclusively proven that this power plant can be made light enough to meet any and all condi-tions. Having a fuel consumption of low grade materials, equal to about one-sixth the cost of high test gaso-line, it is evident that some attention had to be given this machine. After Diesel has been recognized as stand- and sail boats, harbor tugs and from Mrs. Norvell's, with the two-

CARRIES ON

Boston is steeped in the history of this nation; its men and traditions are famous. Yet few realize that the corner of Boylston and Washington Streets marks the birthplace of the country's fourth largest industry . . . that of ready-to-wear clothing. Half a century ago, two progressive men, Freeland and Loomis, established a large clothing store, now The Continental Clothing Company, on this very corner. At the advent of electric lights, they immediately installed them . . . making their store one of the first in America to adopt an electric lighting system.

In continuing the progressive methods of Freeland and Loomis. the executives of this Company have completely remodelled the store, and, at the same time, installed a system of electric illumination recognized as one of the best in the city.

Like their famed predecessors, these executives realize the value of electricity, and know that, correctly used, it lights the way to more customers, more sales, and quicker stock turnovers. These results are not peculiar to this business, but apply to every business. Perhaps you have a problem in lighting your store to the best possible advantage.

The Edison Illuminating Engineers co-operated in planning the modern and efficient installation for The Continental . . . let them help you and your store. To obtain the services of an Illuminating Engineer, phone Hancock 3300.

Not a Studious Spectacle

In the New York Public Library many a visitor has been astounded to be requested by an attendant not to read morning papers in the reading room. On the face of it, that would seem a ridiculous request, for the alternative, when one has sent for books, is to sit idle handed, gazing absently about, certainly not a studious spectacle within an institution whose purpose is the cultivation of a studious attitude in life. But the facil ities of the New York Public Library are small in comparison with the demands made upon it; and the rule was made on the supposition that, if the reading of two-cent morning papers were permitted in the reading room, every Tom, Dick and Harry having no use for the library and its oks, might take to coming in to enjoy the quiet and warmth and the chairs which have been provided by the people of the City of New York for people who need to use the li-brary's books.

In the Boston Public Library one is not forbidden to read newspapers while waiting for books. To be sure there is a newspaper room, and there is among the patrons of the library a sort of common consent that when one wishes to read newspapers the place to do it is the newspaper room. However, no clerk pounces upon you if you read a newspaper in Bates Hall. Perhaps partly because that is one of the most innocuous uses to which the room has been put, in its

Field of Research Needs Enthusiasm

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR MANCHESTER, Eng.-That the key to successful industrial research will be found in the development of the individual enthusiasm of research workers was the contention maintained by Dr. F. A. Freeth, at the annual joint meeting of the Manchester Literary and Philosophical Society, the Society of Chemical Industry, the Institute of Chemistry and the Society of Dyers and Colorists (Manchester section).

A great difference exists, asserted Dr. Freeth, between the man who is filled with a kind of "glorious obsession" and a man who is merely doing the work in order to earn a living.
Dr. Freeth believed that in the future research would not be affected by trades, but by the activities of various sections ... of natural science, into which all the affected trades

RUMANIAN LABOR MOUNTING SCALE OF EDUCATION

Much Is Being Done to Improve the Condition of Apprentices

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO BUCHAREST-One of the most promising and progressive pieces of social and educational work in behalf of the laboring classes in industry, especially for boy and girl apprentices, in the Balkans and eastern Europe, is probably taking place in Rumania.

Credit for the idea and the initiative is said to be due to the efforts of a recent Minister of Labor who one of seven boys in a family which was early robbed of the sup-port of a father. Against odds the boy entered school and secured an education-something formerly very unusual in Rumania where there has long existed a sharp line of demarca-tion between the working classes and the so-called intellectuals.

When the boy finally got through commercial school his popularity tempted him into politics and he finally reached the post where he was given the opportunity to serve the class from which he had risen, and he did not forget.

One of the first duties he assigned

Parliament a law which would better the situation of the apprentice by giving him an education and by bettering the conditions under which he works and lives. The law compels every employer to pay a tax of two lei, or a little more than one cent, per small monthly saving for the crea-week, for each workman employed, tion of a fund for the purchase of and with this revenue the Minister an outfit upon graduation. of Labor is fast meeting the needs of a large majority of the apprentice-tlass, although he is by no means yet in a position to accept all who apply. The total income during the past two years averaged 80,000,000 lei, or about $500,000, and it is surprising what has been done with that amount.

The Director General of this department, an engineer, recently invited the writer and other foreigners visit the various establishments in Bucharest which have been in-augurated, and also some of those now under construction. A series of workmen's restaurants where men Both deputations have been comwere eating substantial meals at the low cost of 14 cents were first visited. There were also libraries attached.

Then a series of boys' schools where beds with clean linen were lined in soldier fashion, were inspected. In some there were the latest machines for printing which were used for instructions and in others boys were at work benches fitting cabinets together without the use of nails. They have their playgrounds in the courtyards, and already one fine stadium has just been completed, the first of three to be constituted. pleted, the first of three to be constructed in Bucharest alone. And yet the workmen are here, six outside, and many more within, pulling down the house that Cowper chose for John Gilpin's home, a splendid structure to be erected in s place. "A fine building when we've done with it," they say, beating the plaster from their sleeves, and tap-ping aimlessly with a hammer at a pile of old oaken beams, heavy with nuts and bolts, lying in the roadway round the corner.

THE DIVERTING HISTORY JOHN GILPIN Showing how he went further than he intended, and came safe home again

The setting he chose was Cheap-side, in the City of London, the house Number 37, from whence the hero, being reminded by his spouse that after twenty tedious years of married life they had seen no holiday, set off on the anniversary of his wedding day for the Bell at Edmonton, which tavern, lying as it still does on the left of the road going from Tottenham, was a house of good repute as far back as the days of James I, possessing a large banqueting hall and pleasure grounds. The house pro-claims its connection with the famous poem by a fine painting of Gilpin astride the horse he borrowed from his good friend the Callender. Most folk call it "Gilpin's Bell," but the landlord has it. "The Bell, and Johnny Gilpin's Ride." There used to be a balcony there in Cowper's day, from which Gilpin's loving wife

One who Ezziani writes: was at the reading wrote of it afterward: "The whole audience chuckled, and Mrs. Siddons, who sate next to me, lifted her unequalled dramatic hand, and clapped as heartily as she herself used to be applauded in the same manner." Thereafter John Gilpin became the talk of the town, and was in the

Not content with the fun he had got out of the many-versed ballad, Cowper later added three stanzas which George Romney illustrated, and which were found in the poet's own handwriting in the possession of a friend. They refer to the period of waiting at the inn, when Mrs. Gilpin, becoming a trifle weary, wandered into the fields at the back of the Bell, where many awkward gates and stiles proved the undoing of the by Lady Austen for his entertainment. It had pleased her as a little girl in her nursery days, and she recounted the whole delicious tale to her friend with fine good humor, little thinking what a ball of fun she had set rolling.

Stilles proved the unioning of the good lady. Gilpin, meanwhile, minus hat, cloak and wig, and clinging to the mane of his nimble steed, had passed the inn and the good dinner which was getting cold, and was well on his way to Ware.

Ride on, old horseman! Ride on The story delighted the poet—delighted him so much, in fact, that all the following night he lay awake with amusement, turning over the chief facts and running them together to his own satisfaction. And then if the workmen are tugging to dislodge a great oaken beam this dull November day!
"Better down, you know," observed

one of the workmen. "No use in keeping shaky old houses."

They give another mighty tug, but the oak beam refuses to budge, and you leave it there, turning down the street toward the bus "stop," while the silver of late afternoon twists itself like a fine frail shawl about the place and its memories. And waiting on the curb you find yourself repeating the last verse of the poem, as if to hono your old friend:

Now let us sing, Long live the King, And Gilpin long live he, And when he next doth ride abroad, May I be there to see!

Adventure of a Sleepy-Head

OST surely if ever a little boy had a comfortable bed and every reason for wanting to stay in it that boy was Noddy. It was the plumpest bed, and the bounclest bed, and the sunggest bed imaginable—altogether as satisfactory a bed as could be found in a day's journey. In it, Noddy could turn on one side and look out into the tree tops, or he could turn the other way and see all over the garden, or he could lie quite still and look at noth.

Probably they were supposed to sleep late, decided Noddy, going on to the next bed. No better luck there! His sharp little punch that ended in a pinch brought a cross fellow out of the blankets.

"Here, stop that!" he demanded.
"On't you know I'm to go at noon? I used to go at 10 o'clock but now I go at noon. I'm the dillar, the dollar, the 10 o'clock scholar," and he disappeared beneath the blankets again.

"Oh, dear!" sighed Noddy, "they and see all over the garden, or he could lie quite still and look at nothing but the pretty flowered walls and think sometimes, when he was not sleepy, what a pleasant thing it was glanced cautiously back over his

Then more often than not, Noddy squirmed about luxuriously, snuggled down, and was off to sleep again. And that was just what he did on a certain morning, a sharp, crisp morning, when Mother had called up the stairway more than once, "Noddy! Noddy! Get up, my dear!" and again, "Noddy, son, hop out now-buck-wheat cakes for breakfast!"

It was rather a long trip, thought Noddy, and there were a tremen-dous lot of beds, but finally he was back and bowing before the King and Queen.

"It's done!" he announced proudly. "They are all getting up!"
The King looked out over Noddy's

"My dear, my dear," he said to the Queen when he had his breath again, "they are all getting up!"

"Wake them up!" he said shortly, folding his paper over to the sport sheet. "Wake them up," repeated the Queen softly. He would see to it that they were waked this time, and no mistake, thought Noddy, giving the first sleeper a punch that ended in a plinch, and the second sleeper something very much the same. Such vigorous digs they were, that it is very likely every boy would soon have been scrambling out onto the rug if there had not been so many things to interrupt Noddy in his work. First there was the bed with the two humps. When they got their punches which ended in pinches two tousled heads came out from under the covers in a jiffy, and two voices chanted grumpily, "We're Robert and Richard, two pretty men, —so there!

A True Story The new doll had arrived on Thursday, Gloria's fourth birthday, but although it was now Sunday, Gloria still surveyed her treasure with a delight that was mingled with awe, so wonderful did it seem that this doll should have actually come to live with her, to be her very own.

The little playroom was filled with dolls. The twins, Milly and Molly: binding, and the wonderful thumb

The id Ever since Gloria began to comprehend what dolls were, she had wished for a doll exactly like this one, but she never could find the words to explain what she wanted. She only knew that when, in the store window, or in some other little girl's carriage, she saw a doll like this one, it seemed like the red and gold sunset, almost too beautiful to be true.

"When I was a little boy and lived "In Wales, across the ocean," continued Mr. Evans, "my grandmother used to tell me this story. I suppose her grandmother told it to her, for although it is a true story, it hap-

But somehow Mother had understood, and on Thursday morning there was waiting for her at the breakfast table what Gloria considered the most heautiful doll in all boys and girls could read, for books were very scarce, and they did not have great schools then as you have now blooked at the soft, woolly, pink jacket and bonnet, and the lace-edged dress peeping beneath, and when she took the soft little bundle that looked at the soft little bundle that looked were very scarce, and they did not have great schools then as you have girl, named Mary Jones, who walked several miles each week to the home of a kind lady who taught her to the soft little bundle that looked read. NEW YORK—Quiet recovery in stocks in the last hour after moderate recession during the greater part of the day, call money abundant at 4½ per cent, a strong bond market with some recession in government obligations, firm foreign exchange rates and irregular commodity markets were the characteristics of the "return to normal," so far as trading hours were concerned, in the chief financial markets. The turnover on the stock exchange was not increased appreciably by the full five-hour session, amounting to around 3,500,000 shares.

Copper Shares Lower

Copper Shares Lower

The afternoon trading was marked by a sharp drive against the copper shares, doubtless partly of the bear valiety. It is recognized that copper rices are rather high, considering the insettled business situation, and while fields on the good copper shares are exceedingly attractive, many fear current dividends can only be maintained with high-priced metal.

Copper shares usually follow pretty dosely the price of copper, and even hose stocks able to maintain their present dividend rates with considerably lower copper probably awould be affected by a drop in copper prices. Anaconda and Kennecott bore the principal selling burden.

Such assurance as cheap money can give was given by the course of rates. Although the call rate was maintained at the 4½ per cent renewal figure, funds were easy to find at 3 per cent outside the exchange and time money was not particularly wanted at 5 per funds were easy to find at 3 per cent outside the exchange and time money was not particularly wanted at 5 per cent for three months maturities. Meanwhile the deadlock over the bill rate continues, some dealers quoting 3% per cent asked for 90-day bills and others sticking to 3% per cent. Addition of Chicago to the ranks of the 4½ per cent discount rate Federal Reserve banks leads to the expectation that the lower rate will become general throughout the system.

Foreign-exchanges were higher. The probability of any considerable loss of gold by this country to Europe, unless and until the discount rate goes down further, is not very likely.

Await Business Recovery

Await Business Recovery

So far as business news was concerned nothing of interest was noted. Colder weather may be counted on to give help to the retail clothing trade and to some other lines, but for the most part the business situation is about where it was. Business has been sarging since mid-summer and it may sagging since mid-summer, and it may have to drop off a bit more before it could recover in the natural course of things.

The stock market break, with the restricted buying of luxury articles which is bound to follow, may accentuate the slowing down of business; but on the other hand, recovery may be more rapid than most people seem to think. If talk will turn the trick, next year should be a people seem to thInk It talk will turn the trick, next year should be a record-breaker.

Wall Street is rather dubious over the ability of any number of business men, in conference at Washington or anywhere else, to make business good by saying they will do so and so and by promising to keep wages up and to spend more money for improvements. Such things are not desirable unless dictated by demand for goods, but neither is too much retrenchment based on nothing more tangible than fear.

Real hope for prompt business recovery lies in the fact that business men were not carried away by the rising tide of prosperity from 1924 to 1929. Consequently they now have no deflation to face.

Trading Record Broken

What chance November might have had to set up a record for volume of trading was spoiled by the shortening of the hours. Measured on an hourly basis, however, trading this month of the hours. Measured on an hourly basis, however, trading this month has been the largest ever on the stock exchange or the curb.

Including this week's closed dates, the exchange will have been closed nine days during the month and hours were shortened on other days, so that only 59 trading hours will have been available. That means less than 12 regular days. The largest turnover was during the three-hour session of Nov. 13, with 7,746,300 shares and the smallest on Nov. 19, with 2,709,900 shares.

With a liberal estimate for the remainder of this week, the turnover will be approximately 80,000,000 shares or at the rate of 1,350,000 shares an hour. This compares with an hourly rate of 1,150,000 shares an hour in October, which set the stock exchange record for total turnover at 139,902,-100 shares.

In November of last year the volume was 114,973,700 shares, which was the largest to date and which was exceeded only in October of this year. Curb sales for the month will be about 34,000,000 shares or at the rate of 575,000 an hour, compared with 520,000 shares an hour.

Individual income taxpayers, many of them, are feeling none too cheerful over the prospect of digging up cash in about two weeks to pay the fourth installment of last year's income tax due. From the standpoint of taxpayers as a whole, however, there is some sweetening in the cup. For one thing, the market break has brought a promise of a cut in the tax rate; for another, government expenditure will be lessened as a result of easy money.

NEW YORK—A development discussed in the Street is the amount of stocks being purchased by corporations. In many cases these purchases are stocks of the company doing the buying, such stocks to be used to take care of requirements of employee stock purchase plans. In other instances companies are buying stocks of other corporations in which they already, own a large or controlling interest and are adding to this ownership at present market levels; there are still other cases where 1arge companies are buying into units and which may be paving the way for merger developments of 7 per cent preferred stock at $110 a share and accrued dividends.

Associated Gas & Electric System $8 Interest Bearing Allotment Certificates

Three-tenths share Additional $5 Preferred Stock Included and Cost Reduced

In view of the recent drastic decline in all security prices the Board of Directors of Associated Gas and Electric Company has decided to authorize the modification of its $8 Interest Bearing Allotment Certificates so as to make them much more attractive and has authorized a reduction in price from $133 to $120, without, however, making any change in the interest rate of $8 per annum.

The amount of Associated Gas and Electric Company $5 Dividend Preferred Stock included in each Allotment Cer-tificate will be increased two and one-half times from onefifth of a share to one-half of a share. This change will also make the securities included in the Allotment Certificates more largely of a fixed return investment character, thereby harmonizing with the present trend of the best investment advice.

The reduced price of $120 will materially increase the yield of the Allotment Certificates, as no reduction will be made in the interest rate. The increase in the amount of Preferred Stock will also substantially increase the return when the Allotment Certificates are exchanged for the securities.

The high point in the market value of the securities included in each Allotment Certificate before the recent drastic reduction in the price levels, was over $190 as compared with the reduced subscription price of $120, which is substantially below the present market value of the securities which are included.

These changes in the Allotment Certificates present, therefore, much greater possibilities of appreciation in principal when market conditions become normal as well as assuring a substantially larger income for a smaller outlay

The new Stock Purchase Rights to purchase Class A and Common Stock which will be deliverable under the Allotment Certificates and which will represent a split-up and improvement of the present Debenture Rights, should command a higher price than the present Debenture Rights now quoted on the New York Curb Exchange. The present Debenture Rights of which the Company has reacquired a very large pro portion, expire on January 2, 1931, whereas the new "Rights" to be covered by the Allotment Certificates after they are split-up, will extend, at a small step-up in the price payable each year when exercised, for a period of over four years, and will not expire until January 2, 1934.

The increase in the securities included in the Allotment Certificates and the reduction in price will apply to all subscriptions whether paid in cash or securities

The $8 Interest Bearing Allotment Certificates of Associated Gas and Electric Company, as above,

- (a) Five shares of new General Gas & Elec-tric Corporation Class A Common Stock (traded in on a when issued basis on the New York Curb Exchange, the old stock being listed on the New York Stock Exchange);
- (b) One-half share of Associated Gas and Electric Company $5 Preferred Stock;
- (c) Five new "Rights" to purchase Class A and Common Stock of Associated Gas and Electric Company.

Holders will also have the option of exchanging any Allotment Certificate, after July 1, 1930, for either (a) $120 principal amount of 5% Convertible Gold Debentures, due 1965, of Associated Gas and Electric Company, convertible, at the holder's option, on and after November 15, 1933 and until November 15, 1943, into 1 share of $5.50 Dividend Preferred Stock of this Company at the rate of one share per $100 principal amount, or (b) $100 principal amount of such Debentures and either serip for % share of $5.50 Dividend Preferred Stock or 5 new Stock Purchase Rights; interest to be adjusted on any such exchange.

"Rights" to subscribe have been mailed to all stockholders of Associated Gas and Electric Company and General Gas & Electric Corporation and to certain other security holders entitled to Such "Rights" to subscribe are "listed" and may be purchased by persons not stockholders through their security dealers, banks and at any of the offices of our operating companies or from the elated Gas and Electric Securities Company, 61 Broadway, New York City.

Barrett and his Crimson players maintain for 60 minutes of play the kind of football that they had shown flashes of in previous games, but had not been able to sustain during the entire West Point, Dartmouth and Michigan games, and defeat a Yale eleven which entered the game a strong-favorite to win as the result of victories over West Point, Dartmouth and Princeton.

While both Harvard and Yale had backfield players who showed fine offensive ability, notably E. A. Mays Jr. '22, Charles Devens '32, W. R. Harper and D. R. McLennan Jr. '31 and H. M. Ellis '30 for Yale, the game was really fought out in the lines with Harvard showing just enough more strength in that department of play to give it victory. After a scoreless first period the Rangers got right down to work in the second session and soon had a three-goal advantage. They kept this margin until late in the game, when a last-period spurt by the locals-brought them to within two goals of the vic-tors. Darragh and Fredrickson played great games for the losers, while Keel-ing, F. Cook, Johnson and W. Cook featured the New York win.

Brown Hard Pressed

One of New England's finest small college football elevens gave Brown University a tussle from the starting whistle to the close and the Bruins did not triumph by any more than a 14-to-7 margin. The sad story is repeated here, as in so many other eastern games, of intercepted forward passes proving costly. Brown intercepted a Wildcat pass and the receiver traveled 98 yards for the first score of the game. Brown did not add the winning touchdown until seven minutes from the end of the game.

Tufts eleven was held to a scoreless tie by the Massachusetts Aggies at Amherst Saturday, their third since Brown Hard Pressed tie by the Massachusetts Aggles at Amherst Saturday, their third since 1901, when their meetings started. Tufts was favored to win, but the Aggles, idle last week-end, had built up their light eleven for this contest. The Aggles made 14 first downs to 4 for Tufts, but the latter came nearest to scoring. to scoring. The all-victorious small college team of the East, Western Maryland, had a close call, with St. Francis winning, 7 to 0, while Lowell Textile and Providence College staged a hard-fought game, ending in a thrilling tie, 12 to 12.

Saturday's schedule was much lighter than customary. There are now only two undefeated major teams of the East, and one of them. STEEL ACTIVITY SLACKENS WITH PRICES EASIER

Sentiment in Industry Improves-Good Railroad and Shipbuilding Demand

SPECIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR NEW YORK-Sentiment in the steel dustry is improving, even though the industry is improving, even though the volume of business is not.

However, the volume of sales has at no time this year been poor, and steel makers are satisfied to have the totals merely hold their own.

Particularly encouraging were the conferences at Washington, between Government officials and representatives of the country's leading industries, at which the leaders agreed to go ahead with construction and expansion ahead with construction and expansion projects.

At one of these conferences an offi-cial of one of the largest independent steel companies stated that the steel business was improving, and that con-ditions in the automobile industry were not as bad as generally pictured. Immediately following the confer ence of railroad men, the Pennsyl vania Railroad announced the con templated purchase of 150 electric loco-motives and speedy electrification of the road from New York to Washing-

Operations Again Decline

Steel operations have again decline this time by 2 per cent of capacity to the general average of 71 per cent The United States Steel Corporation is gaited at 73 per cent, and the inde-pendent companies are under 70 per cent. A year ago the general pace was 81 per cent. The present recession can not be considered more than seasona.

There is no slackening in the pur chasing of equipment on the part of chasing of equipment on the part of the railroads. About 15,000 freight cars are in active stage of inquiry, while about 50,000 more will be inquired for shortly. The Chesapeake & Ohio and the Pere Marquette will soon be asking for 10,000 cars.

Locomotive orders over the last 10 days have numbered 75, while inquiries total 250. It is presumed that 2,500,000 tons of rails will have been bought for 1930 shipment, which is a normal buying movement. It is in the purchasing of railing stock that conditions are 268 ing of rolling stock that conditions are 1122 the brightest since 1924.

Shipbuilding Active

Shipbuilding furnishes a splendid outlet for steel just now. Contracts are about to be let which will entail the building of 15 to 20 ships, requiring 150,000 tons of steel. The Export Steamship Corporation will build two liners, while the United States Lines will build two vessels requiring 40,000 tons of plates and shapes.

It so happens that the eastern steel

Iron and steel jobbers are receiving just as many orders as formerly though the tonnage per order has shrunk. Structurals are still the leading item of demand out of warehouse. Zinc was outstandingly weak, and copper was in a rather confused state, with sales at 17½c a pound, or ½c below the official price. Lead prices were unchanged at 625c a pound, New York, and 6.10c a pound. East St. Louis. All lines of consumers were nurchasing, and the feeling gen.

Who's Looking for Deadlocks?

TSN'T it just a bit early to begin consigning the forthcoming London Naval Conference to failure? It is well known by this time that speculative and hostile journalism damaged the negotiations at Geneva in 1927 and was a factor in its untimely break-up. The experience of the delegates at the Reparations Conference in Paris last summer also yields an instructive lesson. After the conference had advanced to its more complicated tasks, hardly a morning passed that some newspaper did not predict its immediate disruption. It never disrupted.

The principal business of international conferences is to compose conflicting policies, and it is both superficial and destructive to construe every development that does not look like an open-and-shut agreement as evidence of ultimate failure.

And now before the London session has even opened, some of the news dispatches have one group after another already preparing to withdraw. From Tokyo comes the cable that, unless Japan's demands for a higher cruiser ratio are granted, their delegates may quit the conference table. There emanates from Washington another report which construes certain remarks of Joseph P. Cotton, Acting Secretary of State, to mean that if one contingency or another arises at London, the American delegation will pack up and start for home. There are other dispatches to the same effect.

It is one of the difficulties of public diplomacy that the points of conflict in international negotiations are more vividly emphasized than points of agreement. Statesmen may be in harmony about all the essential issues of a naval understanding, but the lone question of dispute finds itself flung into the headlines and mirrored to the world as the forerunner of another deadlock. After the multitude of "deadlocks" that were constantly reported and that never occurred at the Reparations Conference, we should begin to take our deadlocks with a pinch of salt.

Happily, the preparations for the London Conference are proceeding steadily and thoroughly. London has been in constant conversation with the ambassadors of the interested powers, and Washington has been following a similar course. Ambassador Dawes is now in Paris explaining the American point of view to the Quai d'Orsay, and acquiring a first-hand grasp of the French position. While once the Franco-Italian differences on the Mediterranean appeared rather ominous, the prospects of agreement have been greatly enhanced during the last few days.

The spirit of agreement is apparent among the peoples of every nation represented at the coming conference. Men of good will, to use President Hoover's apt phrase, can be expected to write this spirit of agreement into a treaty which will reduce the dangers of naval competition and lift something of the burden of its vast and futile expense.

Labor Digs Into the Coal Problem

THE British Labor Government, like its predecessors, has grappled with the coal problem, only to be immersed in difficulties. Divested of technical complications, the general effect of the Government's proposals for reform of the industry may be summarized as follows: Reduction of a half-hour daily in underground working time, as a primary step toward fulfillment of the pledge to restore the seven-hour day; and establishment of so-called marketing schemes under which coal production and prices are to be regulated under legal compulsion by district and national committees of owners. Special committees, including consumers, are to watch the operation of these schemes and advise if action in the public interest is considered necessary. A national wages board is to be set up, to which appeals from decisions of existing district boards can be made. Mining royalties are to be acquired gradually by the state on terms and by methods not yet announced.

The chief criticism the Government will have to meet in Parliament is based on apprehensions that the proposals in their present form may induce the industry to drift along with simple output control and the higher prices thus made possible, so retarding, if not actually preventing, the more drastic reorganization without which it is held the industry cannot be revived. The reply of the Government will probably be that, with opinion in the industry so acutely divided, it is only possible to advance toward wider reconstruction by stages. The ministers have already announced, indeed, that further measures, including compulsory unification to facilitate technical reorganization, are under consid-

Another point which has provoked apprehensive discussion is the proposal to assist export trade by permitting a levy on all coal produced. The feeling is expressed that if this foreshadows a sharper international price struggle, carried on by means of a subsidy at the expense of home consumers, the result may be serious. To this it is replied that the power is permissive, and that its possible are is not contemplated until every effort has been made to reach an arrangement with continental competitors to prevent uneconomic price cutting.

The British coal industry is entering a critical era of far-reaching change in organization and | delegates expressed themselves freely about the methods so that the results of the present proposals will depend largely on how they are applied and supplemented. With the establishment for the first time of a national controlling body, the possibility of an international coal agreement on lines suggested by the Economic Committee of the League of Nations at last comes within the sphere of practical effort.

Limit the Lobby Inquiry

T WOULD seem to be a debatable question whether the inquiry into what are called lobby activities at Washington should be indefinitely extended. That the under-cover methods and devices by which the representatives of interests seeking special and profitable privileges from the Government should be laid bare and made subject to regulation or prohibition, as it may seem necessary, is certainly sufficiently reasonable. But when effort is made to influence Congress on matters in which no possible individual profit is concerned, and which only secondarily relate to the economic life of the country, it would seem that those engaged in this propaganda ought not to be subjected to the same form of questioning that is applied to the paid agents of the sugar trust, or other profit-seeking corporations.

It is announced, for example, that the chairman of the Senate Investigating Committee proposes to summon for examination representatives of peace societies at Washington. It is perfectly well known that many organizations interested in the maintenance of peace have their representatives there, and that they are active in their efforts to check any tendency toward legislation which in their opinion may enhance the danger of war. We are told, also, that representatives of the American Legion are to be summonsed, and likewise those who represent before Congress each side of the hotly discussed issue of prohibition. It may well be asked whether in the case of any one of these forms of organized propaganda a senatorial inquiry is warranted at this time.

Of course it is true that there is an economic side to each of these warmly debated issues. The advocates of enduring peace insist that they are seeking to reduce the proportion of the federal revenues expended upon wars or in paying for past wars, while their opponents, of course, point out the part preparedness plays in maintaining shipyards, munition factories, and manufacturers of aircraft. The prohibition issue has its economic aspect, but while it may be alleged, possibly without justification, that the foes of this measure derive support from former brewers and distillers, the financial obligations of its friends can be drawn from people engaged in the agitation for patriotic purposes only.

The appetite for investigating, of course, grows upon that on which it feeds. Rarely was an investigation started in Washington that its promoters did not strive to carry it far beyond the scope originally outlined. It would seem the part of common sense to confine the investigation into the activities of lobbyists to those members of this somewhat discredited craft who seek a positive personal profit from legislation for employers who are engaged in manufacturing or other business which may be affected by congressional action.

Ontario's Quaint Tip to Drinkers

THERE is something Gilbertian in one of the I first steps taken after the Ontario elections by the Liquor Board of that Province. With each permit granted, the board will present to the recipient a treatise on temperance. It was, perhaps, too much to expect that the treatise should commence with the words, "To those about to drink—don't." But the Government has at last inferentially admitted the evils resulting from drinking.

A special warning is to be issued to the purchaser of liquor as to drinking and driving, severe penalties being enforceable for "drunken driving." New regulations are also to be introduced to make the general act more effective, a tacit admission, if admission were necessary, of the failure of the act hitherto to "control." Liquor store managers, in other words Government agents, are to be instructed how to keep the liquor business under control. This one would suppose they had been doing for the last three years, but evidently such has not been

The Government is again loud in its professions (as it was three years ago) of what it intends to do to make Ontario more sober. During the campaign it promised the voters a more effective administration of the provisions of the act if again returned to power. Certainly conditions at the end of three years of Government "control" demand improvement. What are those conditions? Drunkenness has greatly increased; the consumption of liquor is reported to have doubled; and crime and automobile accidents have increased at a lamentable rate. It must be plain to the most ardent supporter of the socalled Control Act that there is very great room for improvement in carrying out its provisions. All law-abiding people, prohibitionists and others, will join in the hope that the Government will have better success with its "temperance campaign" than it has had with "control."

Clearing Skies on the Pacific

THERE is cause for believing, in the light of I recent developments, that a stable peace is coming to the Pacific. This does not mean that all the international problems of this section have been solved. With the situation in Manchuria what it is, and with China's revolution passing through another period of fighting, it is all too obvious that the Orient still has its danger spots. But over against these disturbances can be set several clear signs of an improving situation. Take as an example the recent session of the Institute of Pacific Relations at Kyoto. In that institute practically every nation having intererts in the Pacific basin was represented. Chinere said all that they wanted to say about Jananese policy in Manchuria. Japanese said all that they wanted to say about American policy in immigration matters. American and British course of China's Nationalist Government. There were even unofficial Russian observers present to say whatever they desired about the policies of all the "capitalist" states.

Half a dozen years ago a discussion of such candor, held in such a place, would have been out of the question. To have attempted it would have produced an uproar throughout the East. Today, plain speaking is not only possible, but is accepted in good spirit and leads directly toward mutual understanding.

Note, for another thing, that one of the first acts of Australia's new Labor Government has been to abolish compulsory military training. The old Australian law, which compelled military service from all boys between seventeen and twenty-one years of age, was a product of fear. Australia never denied that. She had adopted a "white Australia" policy; she regarded her compulsory military training as necessary if she was to ward off the hazard of invasion by a nonwhite nation. Much of that fear has vanished, and with it the requirement of military service.

A third example of the improving situation in the Far East is to be found in the announcement to the British Parliament by T. V. Alexander, First Lord of the Admiralty, that the British Government is going to slow down construction on the Singapore naval base. The Singapore base was another product of the fear of a war in the Pacific, a war in which British strategists dreaded an attack on the longextended lines of Britain's fleets. If the base is not to be pushed, it means that Great Britain sees less prospect of such a war.

No one of these events may be sufficient in itself to prove that an era of peace has come to the Pacific. But taken together, they certainly indicate a growing feeling of security there. The era of the Pacific, which so many statesmen have declared will dominate the next 500 years. is beginning to give promise of living up to its

Youth, Brooks, and Tut-ankh-Amen

TAVING for some sixteen years had much to do with young people at that serious period when the young person is "looking for a job," Ancil T. Brown has written a book which contributes incidentally to present discussion of the younger generation by the older generation. Such discussion is no doubt a continuous performance, going on indefinitely like the brook observed by the poet. So the elders chattered in the time of Tut-ankh-Amen. One may, however, deduce from Mr. Brown's book a new factor for the elders to take into consideration.

Without attempting a minute research through past centuries, it may be hazarded that young respect for mature opinion has hitherto attracted attention only by its absence. Such research, in fact, would probably discover that one permanent count in an otherwise varying indictment of youth has been its lack of respect for the wisdom of its elders. Perhaps the permanent count in youth's indictment of the elders is that they show too much respect for their own wisdom. It may be gathered from Mr. Brown's experience and observation that this attitude has now changed. Youth, at least when it is selecting a career or means of livelihood, looks to the wisdom of maturity for helpful

The vocational guidance departments established today in colleges are actually functioning, and large numbers of young men and women come to them for advice. Young people graduating from high schools similarly consult their teachers. Other young people turn hopefully to the extensive modern literature of vocational guidance and first aid to self-analysis in relation to livelihood. Not all young people, of course, are like that: there is still the young man in the picture who wastes his precious fifteen minutes over a sensational newspaper when, like the other young man in the picture, he might be striding mentally onward and upward in the good company of Plato or Marcus Aurelius. There is still the poor oaf who gnaws his silent lip at the dinner party. But what would surprise previous schools of criticism is that so many of the younger generation are voluntarily seeking the advice of their elders.

Perhaps the explanation lies in the word "voluntary." From time immemorial the older generation has been generous with advice to the younger generation on all matters of behavior; it has been almost within the years of Mr. Brown's experience that reception of this advice has been made optional with the advisee. And it is at least significant that where the freedom to avoid advice does not exist, the freedom to disregard it is widely exercised.

Editorial Notes

Those who fear lest the talkies shall eventually replace the spoken stage might well ponder the words of Albert S. Howson, scenario editor, with Warner Brothers Pictures, Inc. "I feel that nothing will ever take the place of the spoken stage," he says. "The stage will live, but the talking picture is the thing of the day because it is going to preserve for all time the personality, artistic ability and accomplishments of the actors and musicians of this day."

The Co-operative Homes Convene building constitute the consolidated business session of a hundred-odd homes. The board room was half full when we arrived, and it was only a short time until its eleven rows of chairs were filled. This was our first sight of a co-operative household gathered to do business. It looked like a polite audience at a musicale. The head of the house—the president of our corporation—was seated at the board table among his fellow directors. The table was littered with papers. Most of them were the annual financial reports. A tall director passed them out to the home owners—or stockholders—as they came in.

"How does it look?" we inquired of a "native son, one of those first settlers in the building who bought their apartments from the blue prints, as all such tell you proudly, long before construction was started. "Not so good. They are going to continue the special assessment next year.' Special assessment? What sort of a co-operative phe nomenon was that? In a youthful co-operative career like ours it meant nothing. Still, as it appeared, it did have a

It was, our neighbor went on to explain, a 10 per cent increase on what those unfortunate persons who still treat with landlords commonly call rent.

Ten per cent on the year. That meant an extra $101.28, or $137.67, or $176.42 for each one of us, according to the size of our co-operative apartment.

Thus to those who were new in co-operativedom, and attending their first annual business meeting, the ever burning question of co-operative home ownership burst in before ever the meeting had been called to order. It was none other than that ancient question: surplus or deficit?

Isn't it strange how that old fellow pursues the home owner? If he has a house and lot, it makes its home with him; and if he thinks he'll dodge it by selling the place and moving into one of those co-operative affairs, why, there it bobs up again.

But on the co-operative scale it becomes really interesting. Surplus and deficit take on new and huge proportions which give them glamour. If not even yet an entrancing subject, still it becomes much more companionone finds himself facing it in company of a hundred others.

All were equally earnest on this occasion. The same thoughtfulness rested on every face. When the chairman arose to explain the deficit—a surplus needs no explanation —the board room achieved a quiet which was memorable

Thereupon we were taken into the realm of the millions. We heard of half per cents on interest figures which ran into many thousands of dollars. We caught a word of third mortgages and of junior bonds. We noted that the interest paid out every year on our establishment would buy outright a half dozen houses and lots. We were, in short, introduced to figures as well as to terms not hitherto comprehended in our modest financial scale.

A large share of it flitted by just beyond our grasp. But why shouldn't it? We have no more to do, as a matter of fact, with such things than a private citizen of the United States has a hand in the conduct of foreign affairs. Our co-operative president and his cabinet can be counted on to see to the financing-or is it refinancing?-at the proper time of that million dollar mortgage.

After all, most of us did successfully dodge that familiar struggle with surplus and deficit when we moved in. The last five of the hundred of us, whom we have named our gladiators and dubbed directors, will have to go forth and do the battling for us. It is these business men we have chosen who shall meet while we are listening to the radio or otherwise taking our ease, and shall joust with bills and taxes, emergencies and labor unions. Once a year we shall come downstairs when someone rings our bell and reminds us to do so, and shall listen to the balance sheet of their labors, give them a vote of thanks, throw in a bit of applause, and then forget who they all are. Still there were a few questions that some of the household seemed puzzled about. For instance, that little item of $12.889 for janitors. Liberal though it looked, a little figuring showed that it represented a saving over what a hundred families in the city would have individually paid a hundred janitors. Yet we recalled seeing only one janitor about the place and one or two who looked like assistants. For a corps of three, $12,889? At that rate it might pay one to apply for the janitorship in his own building. Or perhaps some all set up for the co-operative home commonwealth for have already done so, so that that elegant man in evening | another twelvemonth.

THE annual meetings of our co-operative apartment | dress we met in the elevator last night may have been a jamitor ! Probably not. At any rate our president explained that the bill for janitor service was less than in other cooperative buildings of this size. And that was all we needed to know.

The coal bill was modest. It was budgeted for next year at a mere $5850. There's a spot where co-operation shines. Not more than half of those in single houses hereabouts could get through the winter on about a hundredth of 1 1 1

As the meeting ran on, the deficit and the unexpected assessment became more cheerful associates. The assessment would probably last no more than the next two years. We were reminded that even with this extra amount everybody's home in the building was better than could be obtained for the same money outside. Certainly nobody would disagree with that.

At the end of the next seven years the mortgage would probably be so much paid off that it was likely the regular monthly bill could be reduced 30 per cent. Fine for those who stay the seven years.

But after all, we are all one family. If it costs a little more than we expected just now to run the house, why, let's chip in. Nobody says this, but it's in the air.

Thereupon dawns upon the newcomer a great co-operative discovery—it's lots less grief to raise your own rent than to have your landlord do it for you.

Previously a pleasant-faced man had come in and sat down in a seat across the aisle. He rested there but a moment, because at once invited to take the empty chair at the directors' table. He was the man responsible for this co-operative building-the promoter, organizer, planner, seller-whatever you please, or all of them. He gave us words of co-operative wisdom:

Watch out for your miscellaneous expenses. Our study of co-operative apartments shows that is where the danger lies. The board of directors of a co-operative apartment is no different than any other set of people. If they have the money they will spend it. I am not speaking of your board, but of boards in general.

board, but of boards in general.

I know of two co-operative apartments which had been running along with miscellaneous expenditures of $400 a year, and then refinancing came up which left them some extra money. The miscellaneous item of one building jumped the next year to $3000 and the other to $4000.

It is this little extra and that little extra, none of which amounts to much, which makes trouble at the end of the year. What an enormous total those little miscellaneous items can sometimes make for a co-operative apartment! Watch out against them:

1 1 1 Then he told us that co-operative apartments are becoming a staple of the market, not exactly like potatoes and houses and lots, but on the way there.

"It used to be, in the beginning of co-operative apartments, that the resale of an apartment had to be managed by the organization which sold the building," he said. But there is a growing market for co-operative flats. More and more the individual owners who want to sell are doing it themselves. We are getting inquiries from real estate men for co-operative apartments. Within five years or so I believe that there will be as good a market for co-operative apartments as for houses, if not better."

The co-operative business in our city is thinning out into the hands of a few established concerns, he added. The time of the builder who thought he could sell a building for more than it was worth by marketing it as a co-operative apartment has almost passed.

This was all assuring, and we turned to the important business of voting with enthusiasm. We vote by tiers. No general ballot of the general co-operative assembly is ours, but an election by districts. Every flat on our elevator shaft has a vote on the member of the board of directors from our tier; and it is the same with the other tiers.

Our own director, it turned out, was retiring, and he suggested we ought to have an engineer on the board this year. He named one. It was seconded. Then another member of the tier recalled a builder. She thought he would be as good. A show of hands was called for. It was a tie. The retiring director ruled that one apartment had but one vote. That broke the tie and we elected our engineer, six to four.

The other tiers elected without contest. The results were announced. The new directors stood up. One remembered at the last minute to move a vote of thanks to the board for its work.

Then we adjourned, with our co-operative government

From the World's Great Capitals-Rome

BEAUTIFUL fresco, which is believed to be the work of Giotto, has been discovered in the sacristy of the church of Saint Francis at Assisi. Some monks having noticed an irregularity in the pavement of the sacristy decided to remove a number of bricks in order to make it level. They had not been long engaged in the work when they unexpectedly came across a wooden partition for which they could not account and which led them to continue their investigation. A niche, whose existence was unknown to them, was thus discovered, and behind it an extraordinarily beautiful fresco, measuring three by two and a half meters and in a marvelous state of preservation. The fresco represents the Virgin with the Infant Jesus, seated upon a white throne beneath a scarlet hanging, and attended on one side by St. Francis kneeling and showing the stigmata and on the other by St. Clair holding a lily. Behind the group are angels against an azure ground. All the figures have a remarkable resemblance to other frescoes by Giotto at Assisi and in Florence. It is known that during the seventeenth century several alterations were made in the sacristy of this church, and that a wall was built dividing it into two chambers. It is, however, surprising that the monks ignored the existence of this fresco in their church; the fresco must have had a great artistic value at its time, considering the care taken to protect it when the sacristy was divided into two Signor Guido Verga, an art connoisseur from Cremona, claims to have found at Lovere a most important work by Giorgione, one of the most famous artists of the Venetian Renaissance. The painting is now in the Tadini picture gallery and, in view of the fact that there are comparatively few paintings which are certainly from the hands of the great master, the discovery, if confirmed, will be of the greatest importance. 1 1 1

Italy has recently raised the salaries of her schoolteachers, but the increased pay is still inadequate to meet their requirements. School-teachers are very modestly paid, and their salaries are considerably inferior to those prevailing in the United States, or in Great Britain, even if consideration is taken of the difference in the standard of life in the respective countries. An unmarried schoolteacher in Italy gets a little more than $300 a year for the first five years of service; married teachers receive an additional $50 a year. Salaries are raised at quinquennial periods, until they reach the maximum of $650. In the arger cities, teachers receive a higher pay, but the large majority of Italian teachers receive the salaries quoted above. On the other hand, Italian school-teachers enjoy many reductions on the state railways, on street cars, theaters and cinemas, and in many cases, also on house rent; but on the whole the elementary school-teaching profession is not made very attractive. This explains why the bulk of Italy's elementary teaching is conducted by women.

1 1 1 The principal Italian towns publish a monthly magazine which, both in size and appearance, compares favor-

ROME | ably with the illustrated 35-cent American monthlies. The magazine published by the Rome municipality is known under the name of Capitolium; it has about 150 pages in pictures, reading material, and advertisements. All the numbers of Capitolium are naturally devoted to local and municipal problems; there are, in addition, historical studies, highly interesting articles on Rome's archæological treasures, biographical sketches of leading citizens of Rome, and several pages of vital statistics. Milan, Genoa, Padua, Venice, etc., have similar publications, and the writer has been assured that they have a large circulation among Italians living abroad.

1 1 1 In connection with the recent international congress on town planning held in Rome, an interesting exhibition was prepared at the Palazzo delle Esposizioni, showing the many schemes of reconstruction and town planning of various Italian towns. The section devoted to Rome attracted considerable attention. The great scheme for the rearrangement of that part of ancient Rome extending from the Capitol to the Torre degli Specchi, was illustrated by an admirable series of scale models in plaster and by a series of very fine pen drawings. The designs for the new buildings to be erected in this part of the city are conceived on imposing and monumental lines and show a power and originality of treatment which adapts itself extraordinarily well to the adjoining monuments of classical antiquity. In addition, there are exhibited drawings and pictures giving an idea of the work of building made in Rome during the last few years. The younger architects show a predilection for a great simplicity of construction and to a return to the sane methods of building which seemed to have been abandoned in the first years after the war.

The rent restrictions and all the other measures introduced since the war limiting freedom of contract in the housing business will be completely repealed on June 30, 1930, and from that date landlords will be free to increase rents and eventually to evict their tenants. To obviate the dangers which might arise from such a situation the Government has on the one hand granted special facilities, such as the exemption from taxes, etc., for the construction of popular buildings and, on the other, has warned landlords that they would be severely punished if they treated their tenants too harshly. Owing to the Government's policy in the matter of rents the number of houses built since the war has been comparatively small, and certainly inadequate for the rapidly increasing population, but during the last few months there has been a remarkable resumption of activity in the building trades. Figures communicated by the National Faseist Builders' Federation show that during the first four months of the current year permits were issued for building 71,000 rooms, as compared with a total of 98,107 for the whole 1927 and of 147,650 for the whole of 1928. There is still a great shortage of houses in the larger cities, especially in Rome and in Milan, but assurances have been given that the Government has the situation well in hand and will onevent, by all means in its power, the housing crisis becom-
